A LETTER TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS

BACK IN OCTOBER, THE DISNEY CHANNEL UNVEILED A NEW, original family series: Ocean Girl, which tells the tale of the mysterious Neri, an other-worldly young girl who possesses amazing telepathic powers. Since its premiere, Ocean Girl, which stars Marzena Godecki, a remarkable Australian actress, has proved a hit with Disney Channel families—and with television critics around the country, who hailed the program as one of the best family shows currently on the air. It was a rewarding occasion because there's always such an immense feeling of satisfaction here at The Disney Channel when a program we believe in receives such an enthusiastic welcome.

Of course there was one problem for fans of Ocean Girl: they didn't want the adventures to end. That's why I'm pleased to announce that a new season of Ocean Girl begins in April. New episodes will chronicle the further adventures of Neri as she and her friends launch a search for her long-lost... But why give away the plot? Suffice it to say that you'll be seeing more of Neri and her friends, as well as meeting intriguing new characters.

Of course, from Ocean Girl to Mickey Mouse Club to Avonlea, original series have been a hallmark of Disney Channel programming. In May, we'll begin premiering new episodes of MMC on Thursday evenings at 5:30 p.m. (ET/PT) as part of Bonus!, our night of teen entertainment. Sporting a brand new set that offers more audience participation, MMC serves up its unique blend of music and comedy. And lovers of our Emmy-winning series Avonlea will be glad to hear that a new season is currently in production; the roster of guest stars includes Faye Dunaway and Maureen Stapleton. (Avonlea has been the recipient of three CableACE Awards as the best dramatic series on cable television.)

I'd also like to take this opportunity to mention a new addition to the lineup of our Disney Animation Celebration. Coming this summer is the premiere of The Return of Jafar, the sequel to Aladdin. And for all the fans of our contemporary music specials, which now air every Sunday night at 9:00 p.m., I want to alert you to an exceptional world premiere in May: Robbie Robertson: Going Home. This program is a portrait of one of the great artists of rock and roll—a performer whose work and profound influence spans four decades. That's just one of our music specials. Also coming this summer is A Special Evening with Elton John. I hope you and your family enjoy our lineup of great programs in April and May.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE WORLD OF DISNEY

From Hyperion A DISNEY ENCYCLOPEDIA

NO, THIS ENCYCLOPEDIA does not trace the history of The Walt Disney Studios, delineate the evolution of its animated characters, or list hit Disney films. Rather, this April, Hyperion is publishing the encyclopedia that every parent has dreamed of: The Disney Encyclopedia of Baby and Child Care. Written by four leading pediatricians in consultation with early-childhood education and nutrition specialists, The Disney Encyclopedia of Baby and Child Care combines the best pediatric advice available on a spectrum of medical and developmental issues. It's filled with reliable information in straightforward prose about the daily experiences of child-rearing.

Divided into two paperback volumes, the Encyclopedia uses an accessible format that helps parents track development and pinpoint health problems with accuracy and ease. Colorful call-out boxes highlight issues every parent tackles—such as the basics of breastfeeding or sleeping through the night. Over 170 extensive and clear illustrations depict babies in a variety of stages and situations. Charts, lists, and diagrams outline pros and cons, situations and solutions, tips and rules, and steps to take. Bold-faced questions prompt the reader to answers they need most.

Volume 1 of The Disney Encyclopedia provides thorough, up-to-date information on child development, organized chronologically by age: from infant and child development through the basics of first aid to common childhood symptoms.

Volume 2 is an A to Z Encyclopedia of Child Health and Illness. Parents will find indepth information on over 160 medical concerns. In every case, parents can quickly discern if medical attention is necessary.

Goofy has his own problems with child-rearing in A Goofy Movie, coming to theaters across the country on April 7

Whether starting a child on solid foods or searching for suggestions for morning activities, whether responding to emergencies or watching a child discover the world, The Disney Encyclopedia of Baby and Child Care provides parents with peace of mind in health and sickness.

Walt Disney Pictures A GOOFY MOVIE

No, A Goofy Movie isn't an attempt to cash in on the success of Dumb and Dumber. Disney's original "Dippy Dawg" has been around for decades. Goofy's starred in countless cartoons with the likes of Mickey and Donald; he's even starred in his own television series. But on April 7, Goofy makes history: he's the leading man in his first full-length motion picture. Of course, Goofy shares the limelight with his son Max—and Goofy's handling of parenthood is like...well, see the movie—or catch our special The Making of a Goofy Movie on Sunday, April 2 at 8:30 p.m.

A Special Edition of "Archives"

Disney archivist Dave Smith looks at a classic TV series appearing on Disney Drive-In. Disney Drive-In airs on Saturday afternoon and encores on Wednesday night.

LESLIE NIELSEN, SWAMP FOX

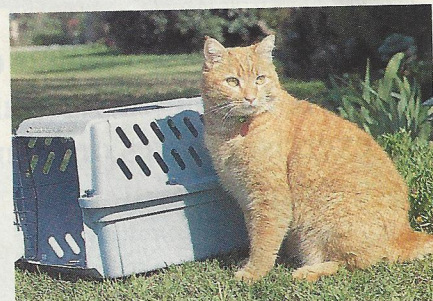

While Canadian actor Leslie Nielsen had appeared in a few films in the mid-1950s (most notably the sci-fi epic Forbidden Planet), it was his role as Disney's Swamp Fox that brought him instant recognition. Disney's tales of the daring patriot Francis Marion, who used guerilla tactics to fight the British during the Revolutionary War, proved a big hit. In eluding his nemesis Colonel Tarleton while becoming enamored with Mary Videaux, the daughter of a Tory, the Swamp Fox, with the "tail on his hat," leapt to instant popularity as the eight episodes aired from 1959 to 1961. In recent years, of course, Nielsen has become best-known for his comic roles—especially as bumbling detective Frank Drebin in The Naked Gun and its sequels.

Spring Breaks Through Again

"Nothing is so beautiful as spring—
When weeds, in wheels, shoot long and lovely and lush;
Thrush's eggs look little low heavens, and thrush
Through the echoing timber does so rinse and wring
The ear, it strikes like lightning to hear him sing."

Now's the time to plan an excellent family adventure for this summer

We all have favorite times of the year: Some love winter's starkness; others treasure the brisk fall, the crunch of autumn leaves underfoot. Many revere the summer, with its seemingly endless procession of warm, long, lazy days. Yet spring remains a special season for everyone, when a newness of spirit lies coupled with the refreshed beauty of nature.

For families, spring offers days long enough and weather good enough for after-school walks, for a chance to play outside. It's a time for planting flowers in the garden or staging impromptu picnics in the park.

Spring's more temperate climate also heralds two other events: It's that time when thoughts first turn to planning the family vacation; it's the time when outdoor sports resume, from tee-ball to Little League—or soccer. In this issue, you'll discover why soccer has become one of America's most popular sports for the young. You'll also find some useful tips on how to begin planning everything from summer day-trips to full-stage vacations. And just in time for Mother's Day, we offer some easy-to-do projects for the kids to create one-of-a-kind, hand-crafted gifts—plus recipes for the ultimate Mother's Day breakfast. We hope "Families" adds some spring to your step.

Traveling PLANNING AN EXCELLENT ADVENTURE

Travel author Carole Terwilliger Meyers says that a great trip really lasts for months and months. It begins with the excitement and anticipation of planning the trip and lasts through post-vacation photos and videos. But for a trip to be fulfilling for the entire family, Meyers says, a lot of thought must be given early on to provide a mix of activities that will delight everyone involved.

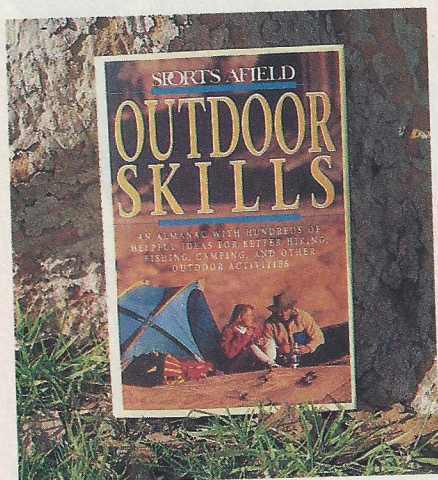

There's no sense in visiting the great museums of New York if a 10-year-old wants to experience life on a dude ranch in the Rockies. And it's not a hot idea to go river-rafting to

Vacation Tips CAMPING HOW-TOS

Few people are born feeling comfortable going off on an outdoor adventure without an armament of ideas and strategies. "Outdoor Skills," edited by Frank Golad (Hearst Books, 1991), offers tips that range from choosing the right tent and other gear to how to set up camp and what to bring for campsite cooking (including how to transport fragile items). Topics include staying warm and dry under any conditions and caring for and storing equipment once you're back home.

PLANNING TIPS FOR A GREAT VACATION

1. Do your homework. Pick a destination with something for everyone and familiarize yourself with the geography, options, and possible routes. Read guidebooks, watch travel videos, and look up the spots on CD-ROM or in a conventional encyclopedia.
2. Be flexible. Expect changes and opportunities you didn't plan on.
3. Build relaxation time into your vacation schedule.
4. Bring toys, playing cards, drawing paper, electronic games—tools to entertain the kids.
5. Pack one outfit per day per child in separate plastic zip-lock bags.

- please a teenager if the parents' idea of roughing it is a hotel without room service.
- To plan a trip, the whole family has to be honest and realistic about what they would enjoy doing and seeing.

- It's hard to know where to start when planning a vacation, and the wide range of options can be intimidating. Meyers suggests that families begin by talking to their friends about what trips have been successful for them and by reading through travel books to get a general idea of what's out there.

- Once the options have been narrowed down, parents can try some armchair exploration with rented travel videos; or use CD-ROM encyclopedia software for a multimedia slide show on an area of interest.

- Meyers warns parents that it is easy to be overwhelmed in the research process and to turn a simple investigation into something that feels like research for a master's thesis. She recommends sketching out an itinerary—and then cutting it in half if traveling with children. "Boil it down to the things that are most important to you," Meyers says. "Get your priorities in order because there just isn't enough time to see everything."

- It's also important to build relaxation time into the schedule. "Kids can be in the most exotic locations and still be more interested in whether there's a pool at the hotel than in seeing the sights," Meyers says. But an hour of swimming—or sneaking a nap—can recharge the whole family.

- Meyers offers general suggestions for families, based on the age of the children. For those with infants and toddlers, she suggests finding one place to go—and staying there. The extra baggage of diapers, bottles, and strollers can make a fast-paced trip especially trying.

- For older children, Meyers suggests that the kids wear backpacks (packed with water, snacks, and small toys) and learn to carry their own luggage as much as possible. If traveling by car, she encourages scheduling regular breaks to facilitate some stretching and light exercise.

- For children and adults, excitement can be built by bringing out books related to the destination, including such classics as

Robert McCloskey's Make Way for Ducklings, which is set in Boston, or Eloise, by Kay Thompson, which takes place at The Plaza Hotel in New York. Also available are a wide range of destination guides written specifically for children. All can be useful for families to discern—beforehand—what everyone would enjoy doing.

Pets & Pals A PET TRAVEL PRIMER

If the family is taking a trip—whether or not the dog or cat comes along—there are many things to consider before the vacation starts.

Some excursions are particularly well-suited to including a pet, says New York-based pet therapist Warren Eckstein. Many campgrounds accept pets, and Eckstein says the smell of fresh air or the sound of a running stream can be a real thrill to dogs, who typically spend most of their days in neatly-fenced backyards. Many destinations offer well-run kennels.

For families that opt to invite their four-footed friend along, Eckstein recommends that the pet receive a complete veterinary check-up, ensuring that it is up to date on vaccinations and has an ample supply of any needed medications.

Eckstein also urges parents to add to the pet's identification tag the name and phone number of a friend or relative who will be available during the trip. If the pet strays while on the trip, the family's home phone number is useless.

Because pets are creatures of habit, Eckstein encourages families to pack favorite blankets or toys. It's also good to bring lots of water from home, since a pet can be sensitive to out-of-town water.

Eckstein recommends that travelers staying at motels call ahead to ascertain if pets are welcome. Sometimes the promise of a security deposit to cover any damage can reassure wary managers. Eckstein warns

SIDELINE SURVIVAL KIT

Families can't successfully sit on the sidelines of any sporting event without a survival kit that includes some basics: Bring plenty to drink, sandwiches, fruit, and favorite munchables. Instead of an old-fashioned picnic basket, try an insulated picnic tote. The tote is lightweight, easy to carry, and foldable for storage. Many incorporate freezer packs that keep foods cold for hours. If there's room, don't forget to pack moist wipes for quick clean-ups, plus a few small toys to keep younger children interested after the food's gone!

against leaving a pet in the motel room, since the animal could escape when a housekeeper comes to clean. He also urges families to never leave a pet in the car, unless the vehicle can be observed from a nearby store or coffee shop window.

If flying, it is important to talk with the airline to be sure the pet carrier conforms to its rules. Clear identification, including a phone number of someone who will be accessible during the trip, should be secured inside the carrier in case it is lost. Eckstein suggests booking direct flights to minimize the risk of delays and other problems.

For families that decide to leave their pet at home, Eckstein says the ideal situation is to find a trusted friend or bonded pet sitter to look after the animal.

Eckstein himself goes one step farther: he calls home three to four times a day, just so that his dog and cat can hear his voice on the answering machine.

Sports & Recreation

GETTING A KICK OUT OF SOCCER

Americans are getting a kick out of soccer.

A survey by the Soccer Industry Council of America (SICA), based in North Palm Beach, Florida, found that 12.2 million kids under 18 play soccer. Soccer is the largest organized sport for youth under 18.

According to Dick Wilson, National Executive Director of the 30-year-old American Youth Soccer Organization (AYSO), based in Hawthorne, California, people are drawn to the game because it's fun, easy to play, and good exercise.

Soccer doesn't have any size or weight requirements, and it doesn't demand much equipment. "It's more stress-free than other sports because there's less of a spotlight on the individual kid and more of a focus on the team," Wilson says.

A SPECIAL ACTIVITY: MOTHER'S DAY CRAFTS

CHILDREN LOVE MAKING SPECIAL GIFTS AND CARDS FOR MOTHER'S DAY. But it can be tough thinking up projects that are easy enough to do quickly (since it's got to be a secret!).

Michelle Safer, an artist who teaches children's classes in card-making at Paper Post, a Thousand Oaks, California, rubber stamp and card store, recommends having a wide range of materials available to kids and encouraging them to make a collage, a painting, or a simple card. She suggests having stencils, rubber stamps, paper punchers, stickers, watercolors, a range of papers and packaging materials, glue, and construction paper out on the table, perhaps with a few examples of ideas to spur on the young artists. "There's nothing like a home-made gift to flatter the receiver," Safer says.

Here are some sweetly sentimental—but simple—ideas that kids can easily use to make one-of-a-kind Mother's Day notes and gifts:

1) COLLAGE CARDS: Have kids make random designs on paper, using marking pens or water colors, then cut them out in heart or animal shapes, either by freehand or using a stencil—and mix with a range of materials to make card collages. Textured cardboard and packaging materials provide interesting backgrounds.

2) RUBBER STAMP ART: A wide range of rubber stamps are available today, bearing simple messages such as "Happy Mother's Day," as well as designs that include flowers, hearts, people, animals, and much more. Kids can fill in the stamped impressions with colored pencils or markers.

3) GIANT HEART-SHAPED COOKIES. Get an oversized terra cotta cookie mold, available in most cooking stores. Lightly oil and flour the mold, then press chilled sugar cookie dough into it and knock out the dough cookie. The cookies are then baked for about 10 minutes. After cooling, they can be decorated with icing.

4) CAST PAPER GREETING CARDS: Using the same large cookie mold and a cotton paper kit, make paper sculptures that can be matted and framed or used on cards. Cookie molds and paper kits are available from The Cookie Art Exchange, P.O. Box 4267, Manchester, NH 03108-4267; (603) 668-5900.

Wilson says participating in organized soccer helps teach children teamwork, fitness and sportsmanship, and it offers them an opportunity to learn to relate to adults other than their parents and teachers.

For Bob Contiguglia, M.D., chairman of the U.S. Youth Soccer Association, based in Richardson, Texas, the growth in soccer is partly due to widespread community involvement in the sport. Parents get involved as coaches, referees, team managers, and sideline spirit boosters, often turning the Saturday soccer match into a social event. Parents are also attracted to the sport because of its safety, soccer has the lowest injury rate of all kids sports.

SCOTT BARROW

Soccer is now the largest organized sport for youths under 18

And soccer is appealing to a growing number of girls as well as boys; an SICA survey showed a 16 percent rise in female participation over the last two years. The game lends itself to play by either gender, since agility and kicking skill are more important than other physical factors.

For Wilson, the joys of soccer go beyond the play of the game. He remembers one parent of a child with Down's syndrome who called him to express her appreciation of what soccer had done for her family. The parents had been devoted to maximizing their child's opportunities and skills, but they had not tried organized sports until they heard of the AYSO's special program for Very Important Kids.

When the mother returned from a team meeting and gave her son his uniform, he went running into the living room, gleefully yelling, "Dad! Dad! I'm a real kid now!"

THE CENTURY-OLD THERMOS

Today's thermos containers may look dauntingly space-aged, but the bottle was actually designed by Sir James Dewar, a British chemist, in 1892. While Dewar was interested in creating a bottle to store liquefied gases, his invention was soon applied to maintaining the temperature of common beverages, hot and cold.

The modern thermos is based on Dewar's basic design, although today's thermos bottles have become more streamlined and less fragile. Many versions now offer vacuum insulation and easy-to-hold handles.

MOM'S MIRACLE JUST MIGHT mean Dad and the kids pampering their favorite pamperer by serving her an elegant breakfast in bed on May 14. A minor miracle is Mom not having to get up and come to their aid in the kitchen. That's a miracle worth the attempt, and here's how:

A PLAIN OMELET IS EASY AND ELEGANT— it takes about two minutes to make. But, almost as easily, you can refine the dish by adding a fanciful filling you can purchase prepared: orange marmalade, smoked salmon, pesto sauce. Round out the meal and the setting with some thoughtful touches. With a marmalade-filled omelet, serve mixed berries and a big, fluffy buttered biscuit you baked from a refrigerated container or made yourself from a mix. Pour grapefruit juice into a stemmed glass and garnish with a strawberry. If you think Mom would enjoy an omelet filled with smoked salmon, add a bagel with cream cheese and tomato wedges to the menu. Substitute tomato juice with a celery stick for grapefruit juice. For the pesto omelet, add melon slices, a crusty roll, and espresso or cappuccino—even if you mix it from an instant product.

A MOTHER'S DAY MIRACLE

According to age (the kids) and ability (Dad), share the chores involved. (Mom will like that.) Pint-sized children will think it's fun to beat eggs by shaking them in a pint-sized jar or plastic container with a tight-fitting lid. Let one child measure out the omelet filling, spread the cream cheese, or fix garnishes. Don't forget to set a pretty tray, including a cloth napkin and a bouquet, or even just a single flower picked from the garden, to carry Mom's breakfast.

MOMLET

- 2 to 3 eggs
- 1/4 teaspoon salt
- dash pepper
- 2 teaspoons butter or margarine
- filling if desired

Beat eggs with salt and pepper.

Place 8-inch non-stick skillet over high heat. When the pan is hot, add butter and tilt to coat the pan. Add eggs and cook about 10 seconds.

Using a spatula, push the cooked egg from the edges of the pan to the center, allowing uncooked egg mixture to flow onto the hot pan. Continue to cook until the egg mixture is almost set on top.

Spread your choice of filling over half of the omelet and fold the other half over the filling. Slide the omelet out of pan onto a warm plate and serve immediately.

Serves 1.

MARMALADE OMELET: If desired, mix 1 teaspoon grated orange peel into egg mixture. Place about 1/4 cup marmalade on omelet just before folding. Garnish with mint and orange slices.

SMOKED SALMON OMELET: Mix 2 teaspoons chopped chives into egg mixture. Place a slice of smoked salmon and 1 tablespoon sour cream on omelet just before folding. Garnish with additional chives.

PESTO OMELET: Add 2 teaspoons grated parmesan cheese to egg mixture. Place 2 to 3 tablespoons prepared pesto sauce on omelet just before folding. Garnish with additional parmesan and a sprig of basil.

The Secret of Aladdin's Lamp

By Amy Boothe Green

Animator Eric Goldberg faced a daunting task: bring a bright blue genie to life for Disney's 31st animated classic.

WHEN ANIMATOR ERIC GOLDBERG left his successful U.K. commercial animation house, Pizazz, to join The Walt Disney Company in September 1990, he hoped his first assignment wouldn't be Beauty and the Beast. Its style wasn't his "forte."

"I love comedy," says Goldberg, breaking into a laugh that sounds suspiciously like Woody Woodpecker's, the first cartoon character he learned to draw at age four.

An award-winning animator who created more television commercials than he cares to remember, Goldberg was, however, interested in Aladdin. When Aladdin co-producers and co-writers Ron Clements and John Musker announced that they'd like him to design and animate the Genie, Goldberg was jazzed to say the least.

"There's such a character animator in my blood," Goldberg says. "No matter what I do, I get the biggest buzz out of really making a character alive. It's a force not to be denied."

When audiences were introduced to the Genie in 1992, Goldberg's creation was definitely a force to be reckoned with. Never in the history of Disney animation had there been a more dynamic character. A giant cloud of smoke that transformed itself into more than 60 characters—from Jack Nicholson to Arnold Schwarzenegger—the Genie was the driving force of Disney's 31st animated classic.

As the supervising animator, Goldberg's first task was hammering out the Genie's design. This proved a challenge, since Goldberg had different ideas in mind than did the producers: "They [Clements and Musker] wanted the Genie's physique to look like a beast of burden, like a guy with a barrel chest, like a fairly classical strong man. They were thinking much more anatomically.

"I wanted to go in a different direction; to make the lines more simplified. You get a sense of freedom and spirit from elegant curves that you wouldn't get if you were drawing all the anatomy."

Inspired by the styles of illustrator Al Hirschfeld and veteran Disney animators Freddy Moore and Ward Kimball, Goldberg toyed with different designs.

"We tried part-animal, part spirit. We tried fat characters. We tried lots of things," Goldberg recalls.

In the end, all agreed that the more curvacious the Genie, the less complicated and more believable he was.

Of course, while designing the Genie-of-the-Lamp, Eric Goldberg had drawn from another major source of inspiration: mega-talent Robin Williams.

From the beginning, Clements and Musker, who also created Disney's The Great Mouse Detective and The Little Mermaid, had Robin Williams in mind as the Genie. Yet Williams hesitated signing on the dotted line, at least until Goldberg whipped up some of his animation magic. The animator took Williams' old comedy records and animated the Genie to bits of his monologues.

Goldberg says, "There was a line in one of the bits where Robin says to the audience, 'Tonight, I want to talk to you about the very serious problem of schizophrenia,'" Goldberg remembers. "In the animation, I had him grow another head, so he could argue with himself about it."

When Williams saw Goldberg's Genie,

While designing the Genie-of-the-Lamp, animator Goldberg had another major source of inspiration: mega-talent Robin Williams.

he was impressed, and asked for a pen.

A month later, Goldberg attended Robin Williams' first recording session at George Lucas' Skywalker Ranch in Marin County. During the four-hour session, Goldberg, Musker, and Clements had expected Williams to take detours in creative lunacy, but they didn't realize they'd get Williams' entire bag of celebrity impressions.

"We got everything," Goldberg says.

"And aside from the fact that you had to pick all of us up from the recording room floor, we just thought, 'We're gonna have to use this stuff. It's too good not to.'"

Fellow animator Andreas Deja, who designed Aladdin villain Jafar, recalls that one day one of his assistants came running back—visibly upset—after looking at preliminary Aladdin drawings.

"Do you know what they're doing over there?" she cried. "Do you know what they're doing to the Genie? They're going to have him turn into Arnold Schwarzenegger."

"No, they're not," Deja said, looking up from his drawing board. "They wouldn't do that. You can't do that. You can't turn him into a contemporary actor."

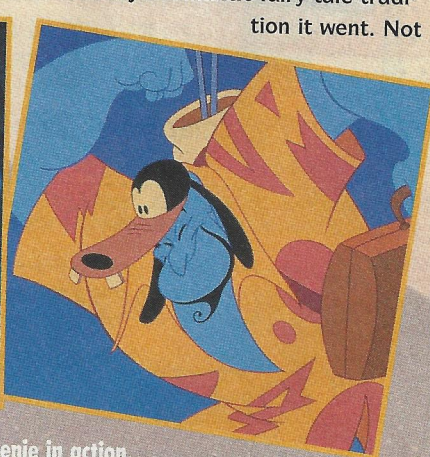

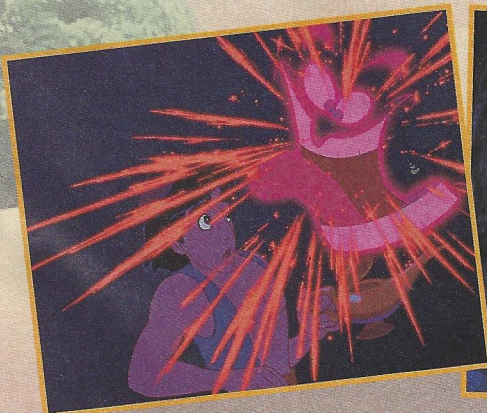

"Well, they are. And all sorts of other things too. You won't believe it."

Deja didn't—so he ran over to the Aladdin offices, where Goldberg was indeed drawing some very strange things: a jut-jawed, electric blue Robin Williams-inspired Genie who bounced from one characterization to another.

"That's when it dawned on me," Deja says. "We're not going to do this one by the book."

And they didn't. In fact, the closer Aladdin came to completion, the further from Disney's romantic fairy tale tradition it went. Not only is Aladdin jammed with Goldberg's outrageous sight gags and Williams' one-liners, but it also employs MTV-era pacing, crazy-quilt colors, and references to pop culture at every turn.

Animator Andreas Deja remembers first seeing the Williams-Goldberg Genie in action. "That's when it dawned on me. We're not going to do this one (the film) by the book."

Amidst it all, at center-stage, floats the Genie, Goldberg's creation. With sheer creative genie-us, the animator created a character that mimics Williams' standup style so brilliantly that it not only tickles audience funny bones, but mesmerizes them with its fast-paced stream-of-consciousness visual comedy.

A giant cloud of smoke that transformed itself into more than 60 characters—from Jack Nicholson to a harem girl—the Genie was the driving force of Aladdin.

Goldberg says, "I felt we had a major responsibility in bringing this to the screen because if people knew it was Robin's voice, their expectations were going to be up there...they're going to expect...this stuff better be funny," and also with animation, people expect metamorphosis and humor, and funny things happening."

Expectations were more than filled. For example, in just one half-hour the Genie makes dozens of eyeblink metamorphoses—transformations so rapid that the audience dare not blink for fear of missing another rapid-fire sight gag. Not only was Aladdin a critical and financial hit, but Warner Brothers animation legend Chuck Jones, who numbers the Roadrunner and Wile E. Coyote among his creations, called Aladdin "the funniest feature ever made."

"We put a lot of passion into it (Aladdin)," Goldberg says, adding, "to have my name attached to a Disney film and know that it's going to go on for generations and generations, to walk into a theater and hear the house rock with laughter, I mean you just can't even compare that to anything."

WALKING THE GOOD RED ROAD

By Mr. Bonzai

From his days with Bob Dylan and The Band to the new Red Road Ensemble, Robbie Robertson has proven himself as a poet, a player—and as a magnetic figure who has created some of the finest moments in rock and roll.

This page: Robbie Robertson the legend; opposite page, clockwise from upper right: Robertson with future members of The Band, then playing as The Hawks; Eric Clapton, a Robertson admirer, in a scene from Scorsese's The Last Waltz; and Bob Dylan in the guise of wiley young bard.

IN 1994, WHEN ROBBIE ROBERTSON was inducted into the Rock And Roll Hall Of Fame as a founding member of The Band, Eric Clapton stood up at the ceremony and made a revelation: Clapton had broken up his legendary group Cream because of Robertson and The Band.

That night, Clapton said that his decision was a response to The Band's "integrity and a standard of craft that didn't bow down to any kind of commerciality... To be a musician who couldn't be in The Band—that was tough." Clapton actually traveled to The Band's home in Woodstock, New York, but didn't have the nerve to ask the group if he could join them.

When Robertson heard Clapton's revelation, he remarked with a laugh, "I understand why he couldn't bring it up to me—I was the guitar player in the band. Was he asking for my job?"

Those revelations form just a part of Robbie Robertson: Going Home, a world premiere Disney Channel special. The program traces the career of a musical artist whose work and influence has crossed musical borders. In the course of Robbie Robertson: Going Home you'll meet friends such as filmmaker Martin Scorsese, catch scenes of Robertson playing with the young Bob Dylan, and watch the evolution of The Band. The musical journey continues up to the present and his acclaimed work with The Red Road Ensemble, a gathering of Native American musicians he describes as "modern traditional."

Handsome by movie star standards, a blazing guitarist and gifted songwriter, Robertson was born in 1943 in Toronto, Canada. His mother was of Mohawk descent, raised on the Six Nations Reservation.

"I think my first direct contact with instruments and music came from my mother's Indian relatives," Robertson says. "They all played something, and when the uncles and cousins visited, one guy played mandolin and another played guitar, et cetera. They could all do something—it had a country, folk music kind of flavor. I wanted to be able to do it too. 'What's the trick, I thought?' Then rock came along and pushed another button. I learned to play guitar, and rock and roll became a fever."

By 1958, Robertson was active in local groups such as Robbie & The Robots. Then came a meeting with blues king Ronnie Hawkins. Robertson, just 15 at the time, describes Hawkins the performer as "half man, half beast." Hawkins remembers the young Robertson as "a sharp young punk for his age, but he had that hubcap stealer look."

Joining up as a member of Hawkins' backup band, The Hawks, Robertson began writing. In 1960, Hawkins recorded the first two Robertson compositions: "Hey Boba Lu" and "Someone Like You."

The teenager played bars and honky-tonks as a Hawk, learning the art of performance with future Band members Levon Helm, Rick Danko, Richard Manuel, and Garth Hudson. In 1963, they went on their own as The Hawks, The Canadian Squires, even The Crackers.

In 1965, Robertson met Bob Dylan and was asked to join him for a world tour—a tour that was both memorable and misunderstood. Having broken the rules by combining folk with electric music, Dylan (and The Band) was booed wherever he played. But "Bob Dylan and The Band" stuck it out, and Robertson thanked Dylan at his Hall of Fame gathering for "not caving in."

Their popularity grew. In Robertson's view, it was because "the world rotated in that direction—the world changed." But the surge of fame came to a halt with Dylan's near-fatal motorcycle accident in 1966.

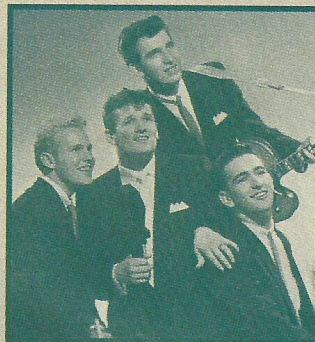

The Band then moved to an old pink house near Woodstock, where they assembled a makeshift recording studio in the basement. "We had thought that nobody will ever hear this so it doesn't matter what we do," Robertson remembers. The result: Music From Big Pink, their historic debut album. The following summer they played Woodstock; their self-titled second album, The Band, hit the Top Ten that fall.

It was at Woodstock that a cameraman named Martin Scorsese first filmed The Band; in 1976 he directed the film of their final performance, The Last Waltz— perhaps the finest rock film of all.

In their 16-year trek, The Band released a series of unforgettable albums, with most of the compositions penned by Robertson, including "Up On Cripple Creek," "Rag, Mama, Rag," and of course "The Night

They Drove Old Dixie Down."

Pursuing film as well as music, Robertson starred in, co-wrote, produced, and composed music for 1979's Carny and also reteamed with Martin Scorsese, producing music for Raging Bull, The King of Comedy, and The Color of Money.

In 1987, Robertson returned to making records with a self-titled solo album. His second solo album, Storyville, appeared in 1991. It was followed in 1994 by Music for The Native Americans.

Recorded with The Red Road Ensemble, Music for The Native Americans was collected from music Robertson produced for a documentary that traced the lives of Native Americans from their first contact with Europeans. Robertson says working with these Native American musicians "sent me down an avenue I would not have gone on my own."

The name of The Red Road Ensemble comes from Native American thought: human beings choose to walk either the evil black road or the good red road. Robertson explains, "Somebody who lives life with respect for nature, respect for his fellow man, and respect for the Creator is someone who walks the good red road."

About the author: Mr. Bonzai's musical adventures include breaking bread with the Beatles; Robbie Robertson was a guest at his wedding.

U.S. PREMIERE

THE SOUND OF JULIE ANDREWS

THE COMPOSER RICHARD RODGERS "had a great influence on my life," Julie Andrews confides. At 20, Andrews auditioned for the man responsible for such classic musicals as Oklahoma!, Carousel, South Pacific, and The King and I. Impressed by Andrews' talents, Rodgers asked her if she had received any other job offers. Yes, Andrews replied—there was a possibility of playing the role of Eliza Doolittle in a new Lerner and Loewe musical, My Fair Lady. Take it, Rodgers urged—and thus a legendary career was launched: Julie Andrews went on to become one of the greatest performers in the history of musical theater. Now you can see this legend in concert on April 30, performing a program that includes classic Broadway show tunes. The music ranges from a salute to George and Ira Gershwin to a medley of tunes by Richard Rodgers. It's an incomparable evening of timeless music.

WORLD TELEVISION PREMIERE

COOL RUNNINGS' ROLLER COASTER RIDE

HOW DO YOU CAPTURE THE THRILLING EXCITEMENT and immediacy of bobsled racing for the silver screen? In the case of Cool Runnings, based on the true story of the Jamaican bobsled team, the answer was simple: You go to Calgary's Olympic Park, where the Jamaican bobsled team had become international folk heroes in the 1988 Winter Games. Thus actor Doug E. Doug, who plays Sanka Coffie in the film, found himself looking down Calgary's bobsled run—a solid ice chute 1,475 meters (just under a mile) long and with all those hairpin turns in the run to think about. "The first thing

I thought was, these guys must be out of their minds!" Doug E. Doug recalls. "The second thing I thought was, this would be a really cool roller coaster ride!" Cool Runnings is a wild and wonderful roller coaster ride of a movie—and it's "a Rockyesque tale of dignity," says producer Dawn Steel. "It's a story about ordinary people doing extraordinary things." Cool Runnings also features a masterful comic turn by the late John Candy as the team's jaded advisor.

WORLD PREMIERE

IKE AND THE CRUSADE IN EUROPE

IN 1941 AN OBSCURE LIEUTENANT COLONEL named Dwight D. Eisenhower stood on the threshold of military glory. As Supreme Commander of the Allied Expeditionary Force, Eisenhower would lead the mighty military coalition that recaptured France and destroyed Nazi Germany—the vaunted Third Reich that Hitler had boasted would last a thousand years. To commemorate the 50th anniversary of V-E Day—Victory in Europe—The Disney Channel presents a lineup of special programs, including the world premiere of Ike: The Allied Commander. Drawing on a wealth of archival and interview material,

Ike: The Allied Commander traces

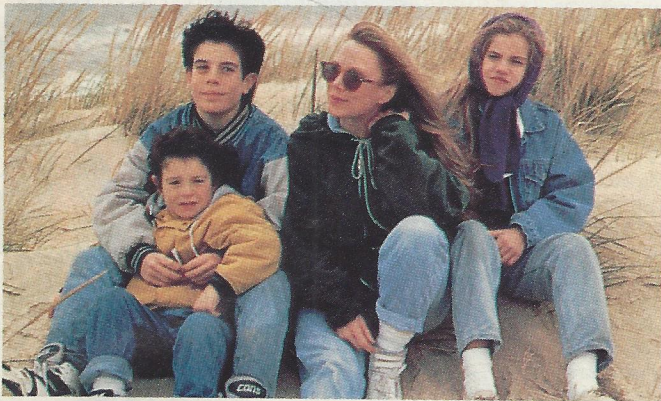

Eisenhower's early military career before recounting the dramatic and turbulent war years. These were the years of challenge, years which required immense political talent and diplomatic tact as well as military skill and strategic scope. In four short years, the obscure lieutenant colonel would rise to the rank of General of the Army. Indeed he was destined to rise farther—to the Presidency of the United States and to the leadership of the free world. Join our special salute to the 50th anniversary of V-E Day as The Disney Channel presents the world premiere of Ike: The Allied Commander.
